Filled with wonderful stories of regular people's interactions with ravens, crows, and jays, it also cites engrossing scientific studies, reports on the field work of biologists, and offers detailed explanations of how the brain of a corvid actually works.

Gifts of the Crow: How Perception, Emotion, and Thought ...

Parrots and the corvid family of crows, ravens, and jays are considered the most intelligent of birds. I never thought I would be such a fan of crows until I read "Gifts of the Crow" by John M. Marzluff, a professor of wildlife science at the University of Washington. Crows mate for life, they help feed their younger siblings and they are very smart.

and other corvids are the only ones known to give gifts to humans. As John Marzluff explains in the video, crows will do this for people who feed them a lot and pay attention to them, or even rescue them.

Gifts From Crows | Outside My Window

The corvid brainiacs are known to leave trinkets behind, but scientists caution against reading too much into their motives. We've been feeding a small family of four crows (mated pair and their two year old kids) for several years. Last week two days in a row they left these gifts, pull tabs threaded onto pine twigs.

The authors state their thesis up front:
"These animals are exceptionally smart...they use their wisdom to infer,
discriminate, test, learn, remember,
foresee, mourn, warn of impending
doom, recognize people, seek revenge, lure or stampede other birds to their death, quaff coffee and beer, turn on ...
